Drama of Sterling Worth at the Richmond Theatre and "The Country Circus" at the Mozart Academy.

The most startling innovation yet made in current theatricals in promised at the Academy of Music next Thursday evening, when the curtain rises on C. B. Jefferson, Klaw & Erlanger's "Country Circus," a venture in which the theatrical profession for the past year has evinced the keenest interest, and one in regard to whose details the public was kept in most blissful ignorance until October of last year, when it dazzled the staid old theatre-goers of Philadelphia. Although its projectors made no vulgar claims or paraded its expense, experts in such matters have estimated that over $50,000 must have een expended in the production. The ress, without a dissenting voice, pro-ounces it the most elaborate equipment ever given a theatrical enterprise in this country. It includes fifty horses and ponies, besides innumerable goats, dogs, donkeys, &c., and over two hundred peo-ple. The third act of the play is given up to a circus street parade, which is generally conceded to be the most gor-geous thing of its kind yet submitted to American play-goers. In the arenic por-tion of the play, which occupies one full act, has been gathered together some of the best performers of two continents, including Professor Wood and his trained ponies; Mile. Venus, horseback rider; Dashray and Vidello, on the horizontal bars; Mile. Herminia, on the revolving globe; Signor Scafer and his trained goats; Mile. Rosina, on the slack lle. Rosina, on the slack wire; James Adams, emperor of stilts; Little Rose, on the flying trapeze; "Muldoon," the only equine wrestler in the world; clowas, leapers, acrobals, &c. The engagement is for three nights and Saturday matinee. At the Theatre.

Simms and Pettitt, the prolific English dramatists, have turned out nothing from dramatists, have turned out nothing from their literary workshop better than the four-act play, "Master and Man." The story deals with a topic which is without doubt of more vital interest than any be-fore the public. It touches the indus-trial problem, and is a close study of the working classes, the characters being working classes, the characters being drawn with that fidelity to nature whice characterizes the work of the greatest of all masters of character painting in proce. Charles Dickens. In showing the relative position of labor and capital, the authors have tried to win the interested attention and sympathy of the workattention and sympathy of the work-ing class without antagonizing the op-posing element. "Master and Man" is a melo-drama, pure and simple, but it is not marked with that turgidity and sickly sentiment which so often spoil pieces of the kind. It has a well constructed plot, with carefully worked up and powerful climaxes, and holds the attention of the audience throughout. It will be of the audience throughout. It will be produced at the Theatre on Monday, February 20th, and will remain three February 20th, and will remain three nights with a matinee on Wednesday.

Jeffreys Lewis seems to be renewing her former successful Southern tour.

Fresh from the triumphs of a most artistically successful California trip she comes to us heralded by the brilliant criticisms of the Western press. The engagement is for three nights and Saturatives commencers. Thursday day matinee, commencing Thursday, February 23d. Miss Lewis will be seen in a round of characters made famous by her splendid impersonations. Thursby her splendid impersonations. Thursday evening, "Forget Me Not" will be presented. The intensely powerful character of "Stephanie" has always been a favorite one with her, so naturally a grund performance may be looked for. Friday evening, Sardou's "Clothlide" will be presented. This is without doubt one of the greatest plays that celebrated dramatist has ever written Elenora Duse, the famous Italian actress, is at present playing it at the Fifth-avenue Theatre, New York, to enormous business. The bill for the Saturday matinee will be announced later. Saturday evening, Belasco's remantic drama will be given a magnificent production. Miss Lewis created the role of the beautiful Russian Geraldine, and it is now a matter of theatrical history that she made both author and play famous in a single night. The supporting company is pronounced unusually strong, headed by Harry Main-

DR. KERR GOES VISITING

He Spends a Day With His Mother in Nashville, Tenn. Rev. Dr. R. P. Kerr has returned to the city after an absence of several days, and will occupy his pulpit this morning. while in Nashvillee, Tenn., the American, of that city, wrote of him as follows:

Rev. R. P. Kerr, D. D., pastor of the First Presbyterian church Richmond, and his brother, James Kerr, a promi-nent lawyer in St. Louis, spent yesterday with their mother, Mrs. Sarah H. Kerr, who resides with her daughter, Mrs. Mar-garet K. Webb, in Nashville. It was her ighty-sixth birthday. The father was a Scotchman, but came to America in early life, married and settled at Greensboro, Ala., where the family of seven children were reared. Mrs. Kerr has lived in Tenbessee for the past seventeen years.

Dr. Kerr has just begun his tenth year as pastor of the First church, Richmond.

He goes to Columbus, Ga., to-night, where he will dedicate a new church on Sunday, erected by a congregation who called him to be their pastor more than a dozen years ago. He accepted a call to Savannah, where he preached three years before going to Richmond. He has declined very important calls during his ministry in Richmond, including one at treble the salary in New York, another to Brooklyn and one to Albany. His suc-cess in Richmond has been remarkable. He never had a protracted meeting, but the congregation has had a healthy growth all the while. He has never had a sacrament without additions, and has received into the church more than five-received into the church more than live-hundred members.

Dr. Kerr goes from Columbus on Mon-day night to Louisville on an important mission. The General Assembly in its session at Hot Springs last year appoint-ed a committee, consisting of Revs. Drs. Trenholm, formerly of Nashville; J. F. Cannon, of St. Louis; E. M. Green and himself, Major Robert Bingham, of North Carolina, and two other elders, looking himself, Major Robert Bingham, of North Carolina, and two other elders, looking to a revision of the Directory of Worship, which was adopted at Westminster Ab-bey, in 1615, and to prepare forms for marriages and funerals, also for sacraments and the public reception of church members. The committee is to submit its report to the General Assembly at Ga., next May.

THE BROAD STREET DRAMA.

A Shoe Merchant Barely Escapes at the Eleventh Hour.

If you are a Broad-street merchant, and wish to be in style, get yourself faked.

The same old story, but this time the merchant escaped by a hair's breadth. Time, 2:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon; place, Herman C. Boschen's shoe store, No. 507 east Broad street; dramatis personae, shoe clerk, nicely dressed un-known, Jacob May & Son's porter, wit-known, Jacob May & Son's porter, witnesses, attendants, etc.

Scene list-Nicely-dressed unknown enters store and asks to look at trunk. Shoe clerk shows him one of the best in the concern, and nicely-dressed unknown decides to take it, charging bill to James T. Gray, tobacconist. The bargain is made. Exit nicely-dressed unknown. Scene 24—Nicely-dressed unknown halls wagon and gives orders to get trunk from Boschen's store and bring it up Broad street. Nothing is suspected by shoe clerk, and trunk is loaded.

Scene 14—Jacob May & Son's porter announces his belief that nicely-dressed unknown is identical with the crook that faked his bosses the night before. Shoe clerk's suspicions are aroused, and at the eleventh hour trunk is rescued from its threatening fate. Meantime nicely-dressed unknown, who is said to have secured a number of fine socks in the same way, beats a hasty retreat and makes good

JUSTICE JOHN'S COURT. The Small Docket Was Made Up Mostly of One-Horse Jags. The genial sunshine yesterday melted His Honor's sternness into a jolly good humor, and there was plenty of room for fun from an outside source, for the docket was perhaps the smallest since he year began. The audience was thin, and even some who came expecting to witness a thrilling tragedy were disappointed to find only a farce comedy of the low order. Would you believe it? Nearly everybody on the string was drunk or had been so, at least. The recent crusade against the gambiers has absorbed the attention of most of the philanthropists, and of late such a thing as a temperance lecture has been almost unknown The natural sequence was that several town artists had a good chance to plead "lack of warning," and they proceeded "do" the town with quite a "sporty"

The case of John Currie and J. H. Miller, charged with having in their possession a lot of iron supposed to have been "swiped" from some unknown per-son, was continued till the 21st instant. A suspicious character and a vagrant were dismissed, and then R. W. Allen and J. F. Paggett were touched for $2 each on the charge of drunkenness.

Gaston Austin is an old black negro. who, though a pretty fair character, will get drunk occasionally. He was on a glorious tear Thursday, and the necessity of furnishing a carriage was soon apparent. The patrol did the work, and Gaston was soon jugged. He believes in eating, and when pulled he had three in eating, and when pulled he had three immense loaves of bread in his posses-sion. He didn't seem to object seriously to being arrested, but the bread must not under any consideration go out of his hands. Those same loaves were brought into the police court, and while Gaston didn't have the little fishes in addition, he was thinking very seriously about stopping at a corner restaurant and ordering a half fry as a sort of relish, believing, as he did, that man cannot live

But the Justice annihilated his calculation by sending him to the calaboose for thirty days. Gaston had sobered up won-derfully. When ushered into the jug he by no means forgot his loaves, and he re sted of Mr. Kerse that he would pre quested of Mr. Kerse that he would pre-serve the loaves until the time was served. The jailer granted his request, but Gasten will likely have to turn sailor in order to masticate the hard tack when he gets out.

Edward C. Beasley did the jag. He was assessed $\frac{1}{2}\text{,} and being unable to meet the fine he remarked to the Justice, "You can't get blood out of a turnip."

"No," replied His Honor, "but you can put the turnip in the jug," and it was so

THE MAN WITH A HISTORY.

the Far West.

The man Zimmerman alias Hall, who is now languishing in the city jail for tricas men, evidently has a history, and a shady one at that.
Yesterday Sergeant A. M. Tomlinson, who has been keeping up with the man's previous movements, received the following letter, which explains itself:

A. M. Tomlinson, Esq., Sergeant of Police, Richmond, Va.:

My Dear Tomlinson,—I am duly in receipt of your letter of the 10th instant, rejulting to the relative to the arrest of Zimmerman and Marion. Also copy of the Richmend paper containing an account of the capture and operations of these parties.

The latter man we are unable to place, but are almost positive that Zimmerman is no other than E. M. Hall, whose police record in this city is as follows: Gallery, No. 1,450; aged twenty-three; height, 5 feet 11 inches; weight, 150; coma pass on railroads.

Hall passed a fraudulent draft on one of the bunks of this city, which he deposited to his credit to the amount of $1,300, and secured a letter from the bank he deposited the draft with to the cashier of the People's Bank of this city, from which latter bank he drew about $1,500, about the same time he deposited the draft in Chicago. He jumped out, and I succeeded in capturing him in Salt Lake City, Utah.

He was brought back here, and was re-leased by returning to the bank he victimized what money he had.

He also succeeded in getting out of the Glen Mountain Falls trouble.

From Denver he went to Cheyenne, Wyo., where he passed a $50 fraudulent check and succeeded in cluding the au-

The society's officers investigated the case, as they do all cases brought to their attention, and reported that the horse was doing well, and it was hoped would recover. They also say that Mr. Callis had caused it to receive every reasonable attention. Had they found the report correct they had intended to ask Mr. Callis to have the horse killed, but finding it so much improved, they made no such request, and are glad to bear witness to Mr. Callis' humanity.

PRAIRIE HUNTING CONTESTS.

A Winter Sport in Vogue in Remote, though the dwellers on the Western prairie may be from the head waters of culture, they are not without pleasure. Grand opera, fancy dress balls and receptions there are none, but of the hearty, cheerful out-of-door sport that makes the pulses throb faster and the cheeks glow with ruddier hue there is abundance Winter is a time for joility and good Winter is a time for jointy and good cheer in the prairie settlements, and it brings in its train a long line of unique amusements as attractive in their essen-tial features as they are healthy and glee-

Chief among these winter sports are Chief among these winter sports are the neighborhood hunting contests, where whole communities join in a generous rivalry, and enjoy the keen sport of bagging the diverse species of game with which the West abounds.

Two of the mightlest nimrods of the settlement "choose sides," selecting the men and boys of the neighborhood alterated with are enlisted in one army nately until all are enlisted in one army or the other. Then a scale of points is agreed upon and given over to a committee. On the printed programme of a aunt, in which 250 members of a Western Kansas community took part a few days ago, the scale was: Quail, 2 points; rabbits, 5; jack rabbits, 10; squirreis, 15 prairie chicken, 25; partridge, 30; duck prairie chief.

40; gray squirrels, 50; coyotes, 75; wolves,
100; antelope, 250; hawks, 30; wild geese,
50, and prairie dogs, 40.

At early daylight on the appointed date helter skelter over plain and ravine the rival parties go, singly, by twos threes, and quartets, banging away desperately at whatever may come within range of their guns. All is grist for the hunting mill, and the excitement grows as the day's end approaches. Sometimes one party will surround a few hundred acres of land that promise rich game rewards, and, in the manner of "whipping" the preserves of old English estates, preceed to drive in the small game of the section, slaughtering the creatures rapidly as the circle closes.

As night draws nearer the hunters come As night draws nearer the numers come straggling into the settlement, weary and hungry, bringing their harvest with them. There has been no stopping for dinner, as something better is to come later.

The game heaped in two great piles attest the process of the opposing forces. At the hunt referred to above there were twenty coyotes, three antelopes, fift, prairie chickens, quail, squirrels, rabbit nd ducks almost beyond counting. The abundance of game made the old hur ters fairly beam with satisfaction. The committee gravely figured up the points. There were 3,121 on one side, 3,060 on the hall of the settlement cooks have been busy all day, and when the result is announced, amid cheering and jollity, the contestants sit down to a steaming dinner, upon the bill of fare, of w appears some of the choicer varieties of game first brought in Venison, of prairie chicken, squirrel, all make meal one to remember, and the bright-eyed wives and daughters of the hunters to serve, it becomes the nearest approach to a State banquet that many neighborhoods ever enjoy.
